Traineeship in the Risk Analysis Unit

Frontex Risk Analysis Unit is offering traineeship for candidate with the following profile:

The trainee will contribute to the work of the Risk Analysis Unit (RAU) and in particular the general team dealing with analysis of migratory trends concerning EU borders, and related methodology. The trainee will in particular contribute to the analysis of non-classified data on returns collected by RAU, in terms of analysis of trends, pattern and forecasting, as well as contribute to the identification and description of possible use of open-source data that might contribute to Frontex Risk Analysis. As all Frontex risk analysis activities must be based on Common Integrated Risk Analysis Model (CIRAM), this field of work offers an opportunity to get to know better the very heart of all Frontex risk analysis. The trainee will support the further development of CIRAM and specific strategic report production.

Requirements in terms of background and personal qualities:

- University degree (at least Bachelor's degree) in social sciences, international relations, law, intelligence/security studies or similar;
- Excellent written and spoken English (C1 level at least);
- Experience with statistics and data analysis theory and software, in particular excel and SAS;
- Skills in quantitative data analysis.

Tasks and responsibilities:

- Support the development of quantitative data analysis on return, production of briefing notes on selected topics, based on Frontex Risk Analysis Network (FRAN) data, including analysis on multiple indicators, clustering and projections;
- Support the development of general analysis products, briefing notes and others.
